Five star: Rachel presents teatime show on STV

BAFTA STAR RACHEL'S T.K. maxx BARGAIN

AS the glamorous face of Scotland's TV and movie Oscars, Rachel McTavish needed the perfect dress for a glitzy bash.

But the gorgeous presenter shunned big name stores to find her outfit in cut-price paradise TK Maxx.

Rachel, who presents STV's Five Thirty Show, bagged her stunning black satin sheath dress for tonight's Scottish BAFTAs for just £70.

And as these pictures show, the knock-down price tag does not mean stinting on glamour.

We asked Rachel, 34, to try on two other fabulous high street designs which are worthy of a turn at the awards night.

She said: "I am really looking forward to the BAFTAs and was delighted when they asked me to present an award."

"I had a bit of a panic about what to wear. There will be lots of glamorous people about and I didn't want to look foolish."

"I found a black evening dress in TK Maxx, which I instantly fell in love with."

Ashley Jensen are all in the running for an award at Glasgow's City Halls along with the cast of Still Game, Lorraine Kelly and chef Gordon Ramsay.

Liverpudlian Rachel moved to Scotland in 2006 to be with husband Paul Hughes, 36.

The mum-of-two, who was working for ITN's 24-hour news channel when 9/11 happened, said: "It takes a lot to unnerve me because a lot of my work is on live."

Shivers

"Trying to keep going when the events of 9/11 were unfolding was difficult but presenting an award should be straightforward."

Rachel, who has two-year-old twins, Finn and Joe, says she has only once been starstruck.

She said: "The only person I was really blown away by was Bill Clinton. He gave me a double handshake and said in a Rhett Butler-esque way, 'Goodnight my dear.' It sent shivers up my spine."

Rachel says she will never return to London.

She said: "I want my kids to be brought up here because my husband is from Glasgow. I love how friendly everyone is compared to London."
